

THE EVENING STAR.
WASHINGTON,
MONDAY, March 19, 1894.
CROSSY S. NOYES, Editor.

THE EVENING STAR has a regular and permanent circulation nearly double the combined circulation of the other Washington dailies. As a News and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

In order to avoid delays, on account of personal absence, letters to THE STAR should not be sent to any individual connected with the office, but simply to THE STAR, or to the Editorial or Business Department, according to tenor or purpose.

Within the past three days two human lives have been needlessly sacrificed by street railroad companies operating in this city. To what extent the victims were responsible for the collisions, and whether the days were suddenly and horribly ended is not material; the one fact in which the public is most deeply interested is the unquestioned and unquestionable truth that had the cars which were instrumental in the two killings been properly equipped with fenders, two bright youngsters, now dead, would almost surely have been probably injured. It is simply nonsensical to say—as at least one of the local street railroad magnates has said—that the wooden framework now surrounding the wheels is a sufficient and satisfactory guard; it is not of the kind; it is frequently an impediment to the holding of the reins against the pavement and crushing and mangle him. It is not strange that the change of motive power from horse flesh to electricity or cable should result in an increased number of casualties, but it is a slur upon American inventive genius to insist that every person that is struck by a rapidly-moving car should be killed by the contact. The average corporation, however, is slow to be humane. Sometimes the Star showed the results of inquiry made by the District Commissioners as to fenders used in other cities, the situation developed being a decidedly discreditable one, in which the rigid wooden fender was the most conspicuous feature. Of the so-called safety guards the Engineering News says: "As is well known, these are of little practical value, since they are so high above the rails that a person's arm or leg will get underneath the wheels even if the body is prevented from doing so." There are in existence several hundred fenders which were of sufficient excellence to secure without rights, and the probabilities are that 95 per cent of them are superior as life-savers to the primitive arrangement in use in Washington. In several cities fenders are rendered satisfactory service, one of them attached to a high-speed car having picked up two dumfries of the size and weight of the average man and the average boy, respectively, more than sixty years ago, tearing the clothing which covered the lay figures. The Star has long insisted on a fender which is something more than a name, and there are plenty of the real article to be had for the purchasing. The companies here should hasten to perfect their equipment, and while they are putting in real fenders should also bear in mind the continually-urgent need for a rapid-working and effective brake.

The Washington Times made its first appearance yesterday morning, and was warmly welcomed by a large number of people, who appreciated the excellence of the initial issue, and saw in them promise of better things to come. Interesting in news matter, typographically attractive, and broadly interesting in its editorial policy, there is no reason why the Times should not achieve a rapid and material success. The paper is owned by a company composed, it is said, exclusively of those who belong to or are in close accord with local labor organizations, and is, to a considerable extent, a co-operative affair. The general management has been placed in the hands of H. J. Browne; Marshall Cushing's shoulders will bear the burden of editorial guidance; Emory Foster has charge of the city staff. With this capable combination in control, there is no reason why the Times should not be as prosperous as its promoters would like to have it be. The Star extends to the newest of its morning contemporaries a hearty welcome, and trusts sincerely that the shadow of the Times may never become less.

When the sugar trust meets the whiskey trust comes the tug of war. The representatives of these two trusts have apparently concluded that in the pending tariff legislation their interests conflict, and after making faces at each other for a season have now grappled. Is it not possible out of the clash of the rival speculators to obtain provisions of law which will profit the public? There is no wiser and more popular method of raising revenue necessary for the government than by a heavy tax upon whiskey—a hurtful luxury. It is not now paying anywhere near what it can stand without decreasing the revenues through the encouragement of illicit distilling which is afforded by an excessive tax. It is easily possible, by a proper wording of the provision concerning whiskey in bond, to obtain this additional revenue without enriching the whiskey trust. If legislation takes this turn it will disappoint both trusts, and benefit only the people.

With a greater mileage of perfectly smooth streets than any other city in the world, there does not seem to be any good reason why Washington should not have the reputation of being the city of the future. The engine in question, the largest and most powerful of its class, is self-propelling, has an extreme speed of more than thirty miles an hour, and is just as easy to handle as an engine drawn by two powerful and rapidly-moving horses. The running gear is extremely simple, and its working is so simple that a child could manage it. The engine is driven by a horizontal steam engine, over two hundred feet of three and one-half inch hose, was sent 244 feet, while two streams, each of them as large as that thrown by an ordinary steam engine, went over three hundred feet. Washington needs at least two such engines for its high buildings.

Jacksonville, Florida, now rejoices in a water-way obtained by dredging the St. Johns river, which will admit from the sea vessels drawing fifteen feet of water. The glow of prosperity which this brings may not be so suddenly gorgeous as that caused by the prize fight, but it will be more enduring.

King Leopold of Belgium appears to be an ardent disciple of the "no quorum" school of politics.

If the pleasant relations which have for some time past existed between the United States and Japan should be fractured because of Hawaiian affairs, there are people who would be unreasonable enough to hold President Cleveland responsible for the breach, and would support their argument by quoting from the Japan Herald. The Herald is deeply interested in the course of events in Hawaii, and naturally; a large percentage of the population on the islands is Japanese. Discussing the situation at Honolulu, the Japan Herald will not be permitted to take his hand from the plow after having started the furrow, and then, admitting the possibility of a presidential backdown under the influence of almost unanimous popular pressure, goes on to say: "There is, however, nothing to prevent the Japanese from exercising the power of intervention to displace the usurpers and restore the rightful ruler to her throne, an act by which Japan would gain an immense amount of credit in the estimation of the world. What is there to hinder her from setting about the achievement? We apprehend nothing of any consequence whatever. Possessed of ships of war with nothing whatever to do, with men and arms in abundance, and the certainty of success crowning the effort, the adoption of a spirited policy in Hawaii, such as that which is recommended, would be regarded with widespread approbation." If Japan has any such mischief in its mind as the foregoing publication intimates it may easily get itself into hot water. The American people are wonderfully patient, and will suffer long many galling conditions in the administration of their own affairs, but they would insist on stirring Japan up with a long and sharply pointed stick if the progressive Asiatics made a move to destroy American influence and control in Hawaii and to restore Mrs. Deminis to the position of queenly power which she once occupied, but was too weak and too wicked to longer possess. Congress may occasionally give imitations of the now notorious cuckoo, but it has consistently declared against foreign interference, and it would declare war in sixty minutes on any power that set out to upset, in behalf of barbarous royalty, the provisional or any other decent form of government in the Hawaiian Islands.

The Indian Rights Association is making very proper effort to defeat the project to remove the Southern Utes from their present fertile reservation in Colorado to a very undesirable tract of land in Utah. Of course Colorado wants to get rid of its Indians as rapidly as possible, but it does not follow that the Indians should be treated unjustly simply because they stand in the way of the acquisition of the white man. It is clearly the duty of this government to do all it can to civilize its copper-colored wards and if the work is difficult and slow—as Indian-haters are delighted to allege—Congress might sit down and ponder awhile over the fact that it took the Anglo-Saxon race several long and weary years to reach its present status; and some of us are still in an unpolished condition. If these Utes are removed it will be practically impossible for them or for any one else to materially improve the condition of the tribe. The policy of the government now is to make every Indian self-supporting, and to that end Indians are being settled upon lands which they hold in severalty, yet the Colorado people who want the Ute reservation as badly as Abner did Nebot's vineyard propose to move their so-called incumbrances to a country where agriculture is next to impossible and where only the hunting is good. Congress will work no wrong if it discourages this proposition. Within reasonable limits the art of land speculation does not threaten damage to our institutions, but when it involves a principle, the honor of the nation (as in the case of the Utes) is unimpaired, and the vested rights of an almost helpless people it deserves to be sat upon with considerable severity.

A Frenchman was recently fined five dollars for kissing his wife in public. People who sneer at French morals will not hesitate to insist that it had been some other man's wife he would have had less trouble.

It is stated that Mr. Coxe takes pleasure in reading aloud the uncompromising criticisms of his undertaking. Unless Mr. Coxe is careful he will not have voice enough left to give commands.

It really seems as unnecessary as it is malicious for anybody to circulate slanderous reports concerning the celebrated case now on trial at the City Hall. It is bad enough as it is.

Captain Bassett's clock can no longer monopolize the distinction of being the senatorial ticker.

SHOOTING STARS.

Discreetly Phrased.

"What do you think of Senator Sohno's career?"

"Oh, I can't say, as yet. It is largely a matter of speculation."

A Trifle Gay.

Sweet Spring, to every feature
A smile your visit sent,
You're a dear delightful creature—but
You've not been keeping Lent.

"Hitt am er fack," said Uncle Eben, "dat a little leetle am dan'g'ling. 'Ting, 'Ting, don' fohget dat de litle 'tis de moh dan'g'us 'tis."

St. Patrick's day is of the past;
The bands no longer play;
The uniforms and shining swords
With care are laid away.
But springtime smiles upon the land,
And everywhere we see
The promise that for months to come
Earth still will wear the green.

A Conclusive Test.

"Do you think Algernon and Marnie will get along nicely when they are married?"

"I am sure of it," was the reply. "I took care to find out shortly after they were engaged."

"How?"

"I arranged several whist parties and had them play as partners. They never quarreled once."

The Question.

The youth set out in politics, ambitiously he cried:
"Though just at present I must wait,
some day I'll surely ride."
The old inhabitant rejoined, "No doubt,
it's right you are—
Will it be the black maria or a private palace car?"

The Era of Organization.

"What's all this talk about Coxey's army of the unemployed?" said Plooding Pete.

"It's more'n ye think it is," replied Meandering Mike. "Capital ain't gotter hev it all its own way in this matter of organization. Coxey's organized de biggest tramp trust on record an' I'm gotter git inter it jes as soon ez it comes my way."

The Woes of a Poet.

From the Chicago Herald.

Samuel Josephs of Philadelphia has a poor opinion of poetry as a means of political agitation. He is the author of that classic lyric: Grover! Grover! Four years more of Grover! In we go; out they go—
Mr. Josephs is not living in clover, however. He is coming the clams out of his shell. He wanted to be United States marshal at Philadelphia. Mr. Cleveland didn't want him to be. And there you are. And there he isn't.

Generally Objectionable.

From the New York Herald.

The ridiculous scheme for coining silver dollars out of mythical selections is not the worst feature of the bill, for the country could probably stand the addition of fifty million dollars, even of this practically fiat money.

It is the second section of the bill that is most objectionable, providing, as it does, for the cancellation of the legal tender treasury notes which were issued in payment for the bullion and the gradual substitution of silver certificates in their stead.

Special "Easter Bargains"

Millinery & Wraps

At King's Palace.

Crowning Glories to Grace the Brows of Queens.

No cards—everybody cordially invited.

Our buyers have robbed Europe and America's largest millinery establishments of their choicest creations—they have skipped nothing that was beautiful, novel or fetching, and our immense workrooms have contributed no small share to this mammoth galaxy of beautiful headgear. Prices are for small purses.

As for Wraps, we have always sold more of them than anybody in Washington, and this year's sales will exceed those of all previous years. Prices were never so reasonable. Our whole store is fairly bubbling over with "good things." We mention a few here, but skip a hundred.

Millinery.

When you speak of Trimmed and Untrimmed Hats you unconsciously think of King's Palace, because we make a specialty of Trimmed Hats and have done so as far back as any woman in Washington cares to remember.

Every year we have had a new surprise for you either in a more beautiful stock—more variety or lower prices. This year we have supplied in all three particulars, and especially in prices. Here are a few samples:

$2.50 Trimmed Hats.
Easter Week Only $1.48.

100 styles of Children's Trimmed Hats, trimmed in the very latest mode, all the new effects, all the fashionable colors. Easter week only $1.48 Instead of $2.50.

About Buying Jewelry!

When you look about for a bank in which to deposit your money you pick out one in which you have absolute confidence. Let it be in buying jewelry. Find a jeweler who has but "one price," and that price plainly marked so you can read it yourself. Find one who has so much faith in his stock and his prices that he guarantees both. Find one who won't sell you lead or plated ware for sterling silver, or burnt gilt for gold. We believe there is but one way to properly conduct a jewelry store—or any other store for the matter, and that is, to place yourself in the position of the customer, serving his interests first, for in so doing you serve yours best. We have no trade "secrets." The rapid growth of our business instills in us with great confidence in its future. Yet we propose to serve you better, sell closer, secure for you the best values the market affords and earn your confidence by never taking advantage of your inexperience.

Whisper It Softly,

—lest it shock our
"old-fashioned" laundry friends. We intend to wash your clothes
without eating them
up with inferior soaps
—without tearing
them to pieces—without that "yalier" finish—and without
"fading" them. Wear
"modern launders'"
for "modern folks."

Telephone or write
and our wagons will call.

Ruptures

Cared without operations, pain or detention from business. The natural and severe pressure of trusses entails diseases upon the ruptured, from which 25,000 die yearly in this country alone. Don't ruin them. Seek a cure.

The Deadly Varicocle

Cared without operations, pain or detention from business. If you are nervous, dependent, tire easily, have a sense of debility, weakness or enlargement in lower part of abdomen you are, safe in believing it a varicocle or rupture. Varicocles are more dangerous than ruptures.

Happy Homes Use

"Burchell's Best" Flour.

The home is happy because there's never "sour bread" in it. Burchell's Best—always the whitest, lightest and sweetest. It combines two choice flours—soft flour in color—gives a great quantity of value, hence the quantity of bread is greater.
